Paragraphs of the Week

Big snowfall left New England highways blocked Tuesday; worst late-winter storm in more than 70 years, causes several deaths and many minor accidents.

Kermit Torrey, 23, of Wilton died Tuesday in the Farmington hospital from injuries received Saturday afternoon when a glider he was flying crashed from an altitude of about 100 feet.

Helen Keller, world famous blind woman, spoke before Maine Legislature last Wednesday night.

Maine Game Warden are starting drive to stop slaughter of deer by underfed dogs.

George Ellis, 49, former Portland man, died at a Bangor hospital Sunday from injuries received Saturday afternoon, when a Maine Central freight train ran over him near Ellsworth Falls, cutting off his legs and left arm.

Calvin Knaide, 83, former Chief of Police at Bangor, died at his home in that city Sunday.

Pope Pius XII was crowned 262nd Pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church Sunday amid exultant shouts of 750,000 spectators.

Three were injured Sunday when Czechs and Germans clashed in Brunn, near the border of former Austria; police separated the antagonists and arrested seven Czechs and five Germans.

Latin Americans may be permitted to purchase arms and munitions from United States Government plants.

After a bitter fight, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill giving the President important but limited powers to reorganize the executive department of the Federal government. The vote was 246 to 153.

Foreign sales of American cars and trucks which have fallen off in the past few months show signs of revival. Exports of autos in January amounted to 27,765 units as against 43,764 in the same month last year. Sales abroad in February were probably close to the January level, but March is expected to show an increase.

Senator Millard F. Tydings (D) of Maryland and the A. F. of L. declare that the Federal housing program is a "great scheme of State socialism," and is threatening to perpetuate the relief status of the workers. The A. F. of L.'s objection to the F. H. A. is that it will tend to create more unemployment, particularly among the building trades, due to the new type of pre-fabricated homes, which can be assembled and moved from place to place.

Expenditures for public works under the present program were higher in February and are expected now to increase rapidly with the approaching spring building season. February expenditures on this account were approximately $37,000,000 as against $32,000,000 in January. Of the 6,180 projects under construction at the beginning of the year, only 427 have been completed, or approximately 7%.

Expansion of the Army air force to 6,000 first-line planes was voted by the Senate last week. This is 500 more planes than was authorized by the House the week before.

RECORD SNOWFALL BLANKETS MAINE

A steady fall of snow beginning Sunday evening continued through Monday to reach a total of 30 inches. The principal roads of the town were kept open by crews who started early in the fight, but long distance traffic was hampered considerably. The snowfall was so rapid that some of the side roads were impassable for a time.

As a result of the storm Gould Academy was closed Monday afternoon and the village schools did not open until Wednesday morning. Other schools were closed part of the time. The bus service was partially cancelled Monday and Tuesday. Railway passenger trains were on scheduled time except the eastbound train Monday afternoon.

With this heaviest snowfall of several years, Bethel has been congratulated many times on the condition of its roads. Travelers comment on local conditions frequently during the winter and this week's work is said to be even more noteworthy.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Miss Janet Palmer was given a surprise party in honor of her tenth birthday Friday afternoon by her mother, Mrs. Earle Palmer. Games were enjoyed, including a spelling match, which was won by Mary Lou Chapman. A birthday cake was served. The group attended the movie, "Just Around the Corner." Those present besides the honor guest were Ruth Garber, Carolyn Bryant, Betty Ward, Betty Warren, Mary Lou Chapman, Betty Marshall and Betty Smith.

MRS. MARY E. GOULD

Mrs. Mary Ella Gould passed away Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Asa Bartlett where she had resided for the past year and a half. She had been an invalid for many years.

Mrs. Gould was born in Albany Feb. 22, 1852, the daughter of Leonard and Mary Andrews Cummings. Her education was received in the schools of Albany and Gould Academy. She taught school many years, teaching mostly in the vicinity of this town. On January 1, 1877, she married Seldon J. Gould, who died in 1909.

Mrs. Gould was a woman of sterling character, very patient through long years of ill health. Everyone who entered her room was at all times greeted with a cheery smile. Her sweet disposition made it a real pleasure to care for her. She was a very loving loyal mother and a friend to all, and will be greatly missed by all who loved her.

During the past year and a half Mrs. Gould was very kindly and capably cared for by Mrs. Bartlett. Survivors include three sons, James and Ray Gould of Portland and Pearl Gould, Athens; two daughters, May E. Gould of Waterville, Conn., and Maude Gould of Athens.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at the home of Asa Bartlett. Rev. M. A. Gordon officiated. The bearers were James Gould, Ray Gould, H. I. Bean, and Asa Bartlett. Entombment was at Woodlawn cemetery.

VILLAGE CITIZENS MET MONDAY EVENING

Although in the midst of one of the worst storms of many years, the interested voters of the Bethel Village Corporation, some 35 in number, assembled Monday evening at the annual meeting. The session, which lasted an hour and 12 minutes, was without heated argument, but a serious discussion of the Corporation interests was featured.

The bid of Walter E. Bartlett to collect taxes for 1½% was accepted. It was voted to raise $1,100 for employment of police, the amount recommended by the Assessors for a full year's service. It was also decided to have a street light near the new residence of Arthur E. Herrick, to accept the land on Paradise Road used as a skating rink, and to lay a new floor in the upper Corporation building. Articles passed over related to raising money for the hose fund and motorizing equipment of Hose Company No. 1.

It was voted to instruct the Clerk to extend to Ralph Moore the thanks of the Corporation for his services in the construction of the building at the skating rink. The letter follows:

UNSEEN STORM
DAMAGE TO OUR TREES

It would seem appropriate at this time for all tree lovers to give some thought to the unseen damage done to our trees by the hurricane of last September.

All of us here in Oxford County most certainly know that the wind was blowing that night. At day light we were able to see concrete evidence of that fact. Trees in whole or in part were scattered everywhere. Others had come to rest on buildings or utility wires and still others were leaning at all angles apparently ready to fall. The damage to forests was to most of us beyond calculation running from a few trees down in a sheltered woodlot to thousands of feet of valuable timber on some exposed forest hillside.

These things we have all seen or heard of but let us see to what extent our trees have suffered from invisible damage. Although a tree was still standing erect as ever after the storm, it is wholly possible that it received serious injuries which will show up this coming year in the health of the tree if not properly attended to.

This damage may be in the form of broken feed roots, split crotches, bark slippage, damaged cavities, loosening of mechanical aids already in place, or other injuries. Let us deal briefly with each of these.

The small fibrous roots and hair roots forming the outer portion of the root system are the trees only means of absorbing water and minerals from the soil. The larger roots are anchors for the tree and are bark covered. These carry the mineral solution to the sapwood of the tree, which in turn, carry them to the leaves. In the leaves this solution is condensed by passing off part of the water into the air, the remainder combining with carbon and oxygen taken from the air. Through chemical action it then changes to starch and sugar in solution which is the digested sap upon which the entire tree depends for its growth. This food sap is carried to all parts of the tree through the inner bark. Thus it can easily be seen that if part of the feeding roots have been broken off, the food supply of the tree will be affected in proportion. Also if the bark has been damaged or loosened from any of the roots, a sap barrier is created and all feeding roots beyond that point in the root system are deprived of a part or all of the digested sap which they must have in order to live.

All the exposed trees in the storm area undoubtedly suffered some injuries to their root systems, the more serious cases showing external evidence through upheavals of the soil around the tree. Any large tree showing such signs after the storm, should be properly thinned out before the growing season commences and fertilized as soon as possible after growth starts. Trees which showed no outward sign of root damage but which are late in leaving out without known cause, should be immediately treated as above.

Numerous split crotches have been found since the storm which were in many cases closed back together enough to be invisible from the ground. These of course should be strengthened by mechanical means before the tree leaves out this year. Otherwise, a wind from the right direction might easily split off a large section of a beautiful tree which was apparently sound.

Mechanical aids to the tree structure already in place before the storm might have become loosened or otherwise made ineffective due to the severe strain imposed upon them. A check of these mechanical aids should be made at once and repairs made if needed, as the parts so strengthened by them will be likewise weakened and subjected to future damage without their aid.

Cavity work should also come in for its share of inspection and repairs. Excessive twisting and weaving might easily cause a part of the filling to become loosened or fall out. A badly cracked or partially open filling allows rain and spores of rot producing fungi to enter and thus defeats the purpose for which the work was originally done.

It is not impossible that bark slippage on the main trunk or branches might result from this severe twisting. This injury would show up in dead bark areas this season, unless a crack was formed which would allow water to enter. In this case ice would form pushing the bark from the wood and would be in evidence at the present time and causing greater damage as freezing and thawing continued this spring. Injury to the tree would consist of a shortage of food sap to the parts of the tree below the area affected, followed by decay. Removal of dead bark and treatment of affected area to exclude fungus and promote healing should be done as soon as the injury shows up.

Trees which require severe thinning or which have a large number of broken branches should be tended as soon as possible in order that the necessary cuts may be made and painted before the run of sap starts. Otherwise the trees will bleed and although loss of sap even in quantities is not usually serious, this year every drop will be needed due to storm damage. Dead and broken branches should of course be removed and all splintered wood be smoothed and treated with a preservative.

If you are not sure of the condition of your trees, do not hesitate to call in a State licensed Tree Surgeon. His services as to advice and estimates are free and he will gladly assist you in any way possible to protect and prolong the life of one of nature's greatest gifts—our trees.

Belle Isle Not Part of Canada
Belle Isle has never been leased from Canada. It has never been considered part of Canada and the only time Canada may be said to have had a claim was after the War of the Revolution and before the boundary line between the two countries had been definitely settled by treaty, asserts a writer in the Detroit News. It was conveyed to Lieut. George McDougall in 1765 by the Indians for a few barrels of rum, some tobacco, vermilion and wampum. From McDougall the title passed to William Macomb, then to Barnabas Campau and to his children, who sold it to the city of Detroit in 1879 for $200,000. Belle Isle was originally Muh-nah-be-zee or Swan Island; the French settlers renamed it Isle St. Clair. When hogs were brought to the island to destroy the snakes there, it became known as Ile aux Cochons or Hog Island; this name was informally changed to Belle Isle on July 4, 1845, by resorters who had made it a popular picnic ground, honoring Isabelle Cass, daughter of Governor Lewis Cass.

When Whiskers Grow Faster
Chin foliage, like other crops, grows faster in hot weather, the Country Home Magazine reveals. At 65 degrees Fahrenheit, whiskers enjoy a normal rate of growth, but when it gets warmer than that they shoot up faster—like corn under an Iowa sun.

THE OLD LIGHTHOUSE STILL STANDS

Breaking Color in Art
Breaking color in art is painting directly on the canvas without first mixing colors. Turner, the famous British landscape artist, is said to have been the first to use this method. The most striking quality of his work is the brilliant, sometimes almost unreal, color effects.

Franklin Founded Junta Society
In 1727, among his cronies in Philadelphia, Benjamin Franklin founded a society known as the Junta-Spanish for "council." Established "for the perpetuation of useful knowledge," the Junta survived after Franklin's death, becoming the American Philosophical society.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

SNAPSHOT PARTIES

Humorous pictures—such as a series of a man eating a squirty grapefruit—provide fun at a snapshot party. Arrange such a party for your fellow camera fans.

WHENEVER photographers get together, the season is ripe then for a snapshot party. Such a party is a splendid entertainment idea—whether its intention is serious picture-taking or just plain snapshot fun.

The party can take two forms. Guests can be sent out on a "picture hunt"—each one assigned to bring back snapshots of a certain type. Or, a room can be fitted up with a few photo lights at the host's home, and each guest given a picture idea to illustrate.

Guests should be told to bring their cameras, loaded with suitable film. Since most parties will be held at night, the preferred film is one of the new high speed "super" type. The host should also obtain a few simple exposure guides, to assist guests who have not had much experience in taking night pictures.

For a picture hunt, one guest can be assigned to picture street scenes; another can picture shop windows, and another can take snaps of electric signs. Brightly-lighted subjects without movement should be chosen, since outdoors at night short time exposures will be necessary with most cameras. Though if any of the guests have ultra-fast-lens cameras, give them stiffer assignments.

For an "at home" party, a list of picture-titles should be prepared. Humorous titles or assignments are preferable, and guests can serve as models for each picture. One person could be assigned to picture a characterization of Napoleon. Another could picture an Indian climbing a mountain, and a third might be told to portray a dachshund viewing a skyscraper. The more outlandish the titles, the more room they leave for the picture-taker's imagination—and the more fun he will have arranging his picture.

Properly, snapshot parties should be planned as a series—each member of a group holding one. Then, pictures taken at one party could be exhibited at the next. Such a party series can provide entertainment all season for a group of camera fans—and it would be a delightful project for a camera club.

John van Guilder.

How to Test Feather Pillows
Pillows do not live forever. The best of them should not be expected to live more than five or ten years. Feathers dry out, lose their natural oil and become flat and lifeless. To test a pillow, rest it over your arm. If it droops it is time to replace it with a new pillow.

Why Singing Is Recommended
Singing as a health restorer, especially for those having high blood pressure, is being recommended by Dr. M. Biehle, a medical expert of Berlin. When he examined 83 professional singers and found that no one had high blood pressure he concluded that singing prevents and relieves the ailment. Continuing his experiments with patients in several of Berlin's leading hospitals, he put sufferers from high blood pressure on a "diet of song," varying the diet according to the condition of the patient.

By TOM FIZDALE

Flying from New York to Hollywood this week, with a stop-off in Chicago, we covered the entire radio front in the three major cities within as many days. Seems fast, but it's a snail's pace compared with the speed of radio waves, which move at the rate of 186,000 miles a second. Radio annihilates space more than anything in the world because it circles the earth and even light-rays can't do that. Credit radio's Dr. Charles E. Fuller for that thought.

Amos 'n' Andy arrived in New York from Hollywood the day we left. Tommy Riggs and his voice-child, Betty Lou, headed west the same week. The fact that their voices shuttle back and forth across the world in less than a second's time makes transcontinental trips seem incidental to radio stars.

In Chicago, Bret Morrison, genial First Nighter, was sad because his favorite mount, a five-gal mare, had to be destroyed on account of an incurable throat ailment.

Also in the Windy City we learned that glamour-gal Betty Winkler is outlining another radio drama idea between her Girl Alone broadcasts.

Greeted in Hollywood by Fibber McGee's able scribe, Don Quinn, we were told that McGee's explanation for California's freak weather this winter was that the ground hog came out and saw Boris Karloff's shadow.

California seems to invite easterners to go back to the soil. Bing Crosby, Don Ameche, Lum and Abner and other radio emigrants have already done it. McGee is looking for a ranch and now Jack Haley is looking over ranch properties in the hills.

Bill Adams of
Your Family and Mine
Golden Gate city will take a new lease on radio life this summer with fair activities.

The Star Theatre's Charlie Ruggles tells me that he has imported a dog training expert from the east and started obedience classes at his kennels. Attention girls: Robert Taylor's German boxers go to Charlie's classes.

Hills here remind us that Joan Kay told us in Chicago that she is now skating to broadcasts of Those Happy Gilmans. She should try coasting down some of these streets.

Jitterbugs are already looking forward to Benny Goodman's return to the coast. He opens at the Coconut Grove on May 22.

Eddie Cantor is off for San Francisco for a broadcast from the fair. Looks like the Golden Gate city will take a new lease on radio life this summer with fair activities.

One of the best known pan fish in America is the crappie, painted for the 1939 Wildlife Week stamps by Fred Everett. A vote taken among sportsmen and outdoor writers showed that the crappie rated right up with the most aristocratic game fish in popularity, although a crappie a foot long and weighing a pound and a half is a real big one.

Going the Way of Buffalo

Whitefish of the Great Lakes were, up until a few years ago, a highly important source of food and employment. Deep trap nets, taking hundreds of tons from the waters where the whitefish had always been safe, have almost wiped out the species. The United States Bureau of Fisheries declares that the whitefish, and other fresh water species, will be commercially extinct in a few years unless strict conservation measures are applied at once. The painting of the Whitefish, for Wildlife Week stamps, was done by Fred Everett.

The "63" party to be held Monday was postponed until Saturday evening on account of the severe storm.

MRS. TRACY DOREY

Onion King for a Day

Few markets are as unusual as the onion market of Berne. This Swiss event is held once a year. It dates back to the Middle Ages, when peasants from the Wistenlach region brought the hungry city a store of onions and winter vegetables. The onion is king of the market with garlands of onions forming the decorations for stands and displays. Onion pie, onion soup, meat with onions and even candy in onion shapes are sold in the city during the day of the market.

Last Friday's games completed the first round of the Gould Academy Interclass Basketball Tournament, with the Sophomores out in front, yet to be beaten. Young with 22 points and Blanchard with 15 led in the scoring, ably assisted by Bull and Clough who each scored 8 points. Runyon and St. Thomas with 9 points each and Amato with 7 kept the Freshmen right on the heels of the winners until the final scoring spree.

The exhibition game between the Seniors and the Post-Graduates resulted in a Senior win 32-26. Littlehale with 14 points and Thurston with 11 led for the winners while Adams with 12 and Keniston with 11 points for the losers kept the game close.

Desert Sun Bathers Enlist Science

Sun bathers at Palm Springs, Calif., have enlisted the cause of science in their behalf. The boxes enclosing their heads are made from sea shells, and are said to permit only beneficial rays of the sun to pass through them, protecting the shapely bathers from an overdose of the health-giving sunshine.

No Wheels in Clovelly,

Town of Single Street

Clovelly is a street on the English coast of North Devonshire, straggling from top to bottom of a 400-foot cliff. The town consists literally of one street.

Clovelly is one of the places which have almost robbed the word quaint of its meaning through overuse. Yet Clovelly is so different that it merits less well-worn characterizations, states a writer in the Los Angeles Times.

There has never been a wheeled vehicle in Clovelly; the slope is too steep. Provisions and baggage are dragged down from the New Road Gate on small sledges. Patient little donkeys are used by anyone who wishes to trust his neck to their plodding footsteps.

On either side of the street white-washed houses of two or three stories jut out irregularly, their balconies brilliant with the green of vines, the purple of fuchsias, the flame of geraniums. The mild climate of Clovelly allows the growth of fuchsias and honeysuckle even in midwinter, and the tiny gardens, wedged behind the closely packed houses, are massed with bloom.

No two houses are alike. They are built of stones brought up from the beach hundreds of years ago by the ancestors of the present inhabitants.

How Average Person Lives

If all the time you've spent, and are going to spend eating was lumped together—you'd be at the table five years! That's what some British statistical experts figured after a detailed investigation into how the average person lives. A person who reaches 70 has spent some 450,000 hours—or about five years—at the table, states a writer in the Washington Post. If five years spent on eating seems like a lot, think of all the food that's put away during a lifetime. An adult averages 1,355 pounds of victuals annually. Over 50 years that's a

Cobweb and Spiderweb

"Cobweb" means spiderweb, "cob" being an old English word signifying spider. It is the common name given to the more or less formless webs spun in buildings by certain species of spiders and larvae of some insects. Most of the tangled webs which annoy housewives are produced by the little house spider, Theridion tepidariorum. Cobwebs on the ceilings and in the corners of houses are usually not noticed until they become covered with dust, a circumstance which probably gave rise to the popular belief that cobwebs consist merely of dust. The impression was strengthened by the fact that the house spider is seldom observed at work.

The Bridge to Paradise

The name Al Sirat is from Mohammedan lore. It is that of an imaginary bridge between this world and the next; it extends over the abyss of hell and must be passed by all those who would reach the Mohammedan paradise. It is said to be very narrow—as narrow, some writers say, as the edge of a razor blade. In crossing, one's speed is proportioned to one's virtue. The wicked, because of the weight of their sins, are unable to negotiate the bridge at all and plunge into the pit.
